

Money and you

1

It's near the end of the month. You don't have any money left.
You see a pair of shoes you really like.

- a You buy them with your credit card.
- b You don't buy them. You don't like spending money you don't have.

2

You buy a pair of expensive pants in July.
In October, you try them on. They're too small.

- a You hope to lose some pounds.
- b You try to sell them on the Internet.

3

You buy two tickets for a concert. Your friend wants to pay you later.
A month later your friend still owes you the money.

- a You don't like talking about money. You don't ask your friend for the money.
- b You call and email your friend regularly to remind him/her to pay you.

4

A friend gives you a sweater for your birthday, but you don't like it.

- a You put it in your closet, but never wear it.
- b You give it to another person for his/her birthday.

5

You buy a beautiful watch on sale. It cost $300. Normally it costs $600.
You never wear it. You decide to sell it because you need a new computer.
The computer costs $550.

- a You sell it for $300. You don't like asking for more than what it cost you.
- b You sell it for $600. That's what it costs in the stores now.

6

It's May and you need a new television because your old television doesn't work.

- a You buy it now. You hate waiting and you love watching television.
- b You wait for the sales in July.

You are very careful with money. You probably never spend more than what you have. Remember sometimes it's good to spend some money and enjoy yourself.

Mostly as

You probably spend too much money every month. You want things instantly and you hate waiting, but sometimes it's a good idea to be patient and only spend what you have.
